IT that grows your business

Distribution Challenge

The Challenge

Vodafone needed to find ways to reduce distribution costs across all Sales Channels.

The IT systems needed to change to make decisions on which courier service to use, based on the products within an order.

The Solution

We performed a consultancy role, analysing existing equipment order data and collaborating with UTL, Vodafone's distribution partner, to identify potential costs savings.

The successful completion of the project, on time and within budget, saw Vodafone saving in excess of £500,000 per annum from their distribution costs.

Once we have agreed on a plan of action, KFA will work with you to deliver the solution.

If we can't help – we will say so!

Design

We are experts in the field of requirements gathering, getting to know your business and how it works.

Understanding your business processes, your systems and how they are used enables us to recommend simple and effective system solutions.

The design phase of any IT project is the most important phase. If the design does not deliver the requirements then the development will be flawed. Time spent in design, clearly identifying requirements and how they will be met, pays dividends.

Our customer was informed late on a Friday evening that their hosting provider had entered insolvency, they were advised to back up their site and make alternative arrangements as servers were being switched off imminently.

The Mitutoyo logo is centered in a white circle with a blue border. The logo itself consists of the word "Mitutoyo" in a bold, orange, sans-serif font, with a double slash after the "o".
